Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a paint mixture containing polyamide and glass fiber and, more particularly, relates to a paint mixture containing polyamide and glass fiber having a good balance between the characteristics of dispersibility, adhesion, water resistance and weather resistance. The paint mixture containing polyamide and glass fiber according to the present invention can be advantageously used in coating various parts such as automobiles and motorcycles and the like, window glasses of buildings and transportation facilities, container inner surfaces, ceramics, glass fibers, glass laminated products and the like. 2. Description of the Prior Art There has been generally used a glass fiber-containing paint containing a polyamide resin which is excellent in the characteristics of binding, penetrability and the like, as a paint for vehicles in particular, because it is excellent in the characteristics of the adhesion, water resistance and the like when it is used as a paint for vehicles. On the other hand, since the paint for vehicles including a polyamide-containing paint is excellent in the characteristics of dispersibility, adhesion, water resistance and weather resistance, the paint for vehicles is generally required to have a high water resistance. However, it is difficult to prepare a polyamide resin having a high weather resistance by using a conventional polyamide resin having a relatively high molecular weight or using an ordinary polyamide resin having a low molecular weight. As a conventional polyamide having a high weather resistance, there are known a polyamide resin prepared from N-mono methyl aminomethylbenzamide (hereinafter referred to as MMA) and terephthalic acid (Japanese Patent Publication No. 39-20606), a polyamide resin prepared from MMA and isophthalic acid (hereinafter referred to as IPHA) (Japanese Patent Laid-Open No. 49-51266), a polyamide resin prepared from naphthalene-2,6-dicarboxylic acid (hereinafter referred to as NDCA) and isophthalic acid (Japanese edd6d56e20
