Field of the Invention The present invention relates to methods of recognizing movements and activities of humans and machines. Description of the Related Art In a general mobile system, human information recognition methods have focused on a recognition of a relative position or a direction of a human or an environment. In conventional human information recognition methods, information recognition of humans and human activities is performed using a human face or a human body as a physical feature of a human. In a machine information recognition method, a simple, easily-manufactured sensor including a plurality of sensors and an image analysis algorithm are used as a physical feature. Data storage devices such as disk drives comprise a disk and a head connected to a distal end of an actuator arm which is rotated about a pivot by a voice coil motor (VCM) to position the head radially over the disk. The disk comprises a plurality of radially spaced, concentric tracks for recording user data sectors and servo sectors. The servo sectors comprise head positioning information (e.g., a track address) which is read by the head and processed by a servo control system to control the actuator arm as it seeks from track to track. FIG. 1 shows a prior art disk format 2 as comprising a number of servo tracks 4 defined by servo sectors 60-6N recorded around the circumference of each servo track. Each servo sector 6i comprises a preamble 8 for storing a periodic pattern, which allows proper gain adjustment and timing synchronization of the read signal, and a sync mark 10 for storing a special pattern used to symbol synchronize to a servo data field 12. The servo data field 12 stores coarse head positioning information, such as a track address, used to position the head over a target data track during a seek operation. Each servo sector 6i further comprises groups of servo bursts 14 (e.g., A, B, C and D bursts), which comprise a number of consecutive transitions recorded at precise intervals and offsets with respect to a data field centerline. The groups of servo bursts 14 provide fine head position information used for centerline tracking while accessing a data track during write/read operations. The coarse head positional information is detected during a servo tracking operation wherein the head 8 is moved over the disk surface from an outer diameter to the inner diameter of the disk 4, for example, to read the target data track. In general, the process of detecting the coarse head positional information comprises identifying, decoding and demodulating the servo data 12, and generating a position error signal (PES) therefrom. The PES is a digitized signal that represents the difference between the actual centerline of the data track and the centerline of a track calculated from the head position. A servo controller processes the PES to generate a VCM control signal used to move the head in a controlled manner from an outer diameter of the disk 4 to the target track (or an inner diameter depending on the platform). The edge of the servo data field 12 may be identified by a cross-purposes signal 16 derived by cross
