What's new in SOLAR BATTALION:

Last Stitch Goodnight is an American stop-motion animated television series created by Karen Poe Bynum for MTV's Kid's Pick programming. The program was first broadcast on the MTV network on the channel's original channel in the United States on March 9, 2001. It was followed by a series of DVD releases. Plot Last Stitch Goodnight stars the ghost of a 16-year-old girl named Sarah Sade. Her story is told through 14 episodes in the Middle Ages, 10th Century, and 20th Century. Sarah's ghost appears during the Middle Ages (before the 20th Century), at 10:00, and 10:20 in each episode, and sits on the footstool of the parson watching a ghost story called "The Midnight Watch" on the bookshelf. She tells the next ghost story that begins at 10:30, just after the TV screen switches from the present back to the past. The stories were adapted from Medieval literature by Tomi Ungerer, Antonia Foresti, Radolfo

Bianconi, Georg Kaiser, and others. The short-lived syndicated version had a different set of authors. Of the 14 episodes, nine were adapted from novels by Renata Calberti, four were adapted from Jean M. W. Melde's 15th Century collection, and one was adapted from Jeanne de Frolich's 15th Century collection. The show's humor, themes and dialogue diverge significantly from the original novels. Instead of the original writers, scriptwriters like Shaun Pye, Dave Palumbo, and Mark DeLisle wrote new stories adapted from the novels. For instance, the original story in "The Wolves and the Eagle" in The Adventures of Puck and Huon of Bordeaux by Gottfried Keller featured the monk Philippus, who unlike the monk in the Mel the monk in the original, was physically lazy and bullied by the other monks. This role was given to Wesley in the TV series. Philippus, having fallen asleep in church, realizes that the moon has risen, and shouts, "Hooo! It's the moon!" as loudly as he can. Huon stands up and walks toward the monastery, as if drawn by a magnet. The monks, having just had their prayers interrupted, suddenly realize that the moon has risen. "It's the moon!" says the terrified Philippus. "Hooo!" He continues shouting all night long, causing all the monks and the dinner guest

"Fallen Aranján is a mysterious forest that was once rich in exotic treasures. But now the forest is no more, and what remains are the ruins of lost cities - broken walls, abandoned works, and mysterious artifacts. What once was, will never be again. It's time to build a new Aranján..." The Hunt For Fallen Aranján is an adventure/action game developed by The Partisans Studio. "Journey, a game studio based in San Francisco and led by one of the founders of the original "Silent Hill" fame, offers a new adventure game for all the fans of old school point-and-click adventures. In 'Journey' we can experience on a new level what good old point-and-click adventures were about. We can explore a huge and rich world. We can play through a mystery. And we can be rewarded with fun puzzles and an exciting story. The gameplay is similar to that of other adventure games of this genre. But the plot unfolds in a brand new narrative, written in an ever-developing story. Each chapter will give us a different view on the mystery and let us discover new places, meet new characters, and experience amazing scenes which we will never forget. The game features: -Explore a huge, beautifully-detailed, richly-textured world -Fight your way through different enemies, solve puzzles and complete quests -Fight to survive because there's no use in staying alive if you can't remember any of what happened -Play through a mystery which slowly unfolds, and discover what really happened in the past -Play your way through the story and the puzzles, unraveling the mystery -Use various and interactive items to perform amazing actions and overcome the story obstacles. Interact with objects, solve puzzles, and use interactables to survive. Each of these has their own purpose, and can be used by simply looking at them. -Listen to the main story through the game's free online voiceover, and observe an ongoing story through the game's in-game diary. With the diary you can follow the events of the story and complete your objectives -"This is the ultimate point-and-click experience. You can even use item descriptions to solve the puzzles!" -Produced by one of the original creators of the Silent Hill franchise, The Partisans studio and published in Europe by the renowned French adventure game developer, Microïds Music and sound: A wide
