Only King's Kitchen managed an episode with two finalists in a given quarter-hour, a rare feat for the program that in recent years has split its airtime between two stations. On KFNZ, the most-watched show was "6:30," whose "Best in L.A." entry came in second among all shows and second for all local programs. The changes paid off on local airings, as The CW's "Black-ish" also won, beating "Six's" "Before They Were Us" in the local categories. But with the move from CBS to TBS, "Diabetes" is the first show to win the national title that is not also a winner in local competition. The two shows' success has helped boost ratings for "Black-ish" and has encouraged other shows to participate in the local playoffs. Both "Adult Children of the 1980's" and "Derek" competed, "Diabetes" advanced to the finals and "God Friended Me" and "Grandfathered" both advanced to the finals in their respective quarter-hour. The CW also extended its reach, with "The Flash," "Arrow," "DC's Legends of Tomorrow," "DC's Doom Patrol,"

The effects of the cooking, cleaning and heating on the transfer of Myosotis arvensis pollen to the skin have been investigated. Cooking for two hours in the laboratory at 100 degrees C caused about a fivefold increase in transfer. After cooking for 2-5 hours in the laboratory and some hours in the home environment, and for an hour at 120 degrees C in a microwave oven, the spores were found in the epidermis of both feet. After 24 hours the spores had penetrated into the dermis. Heating for 20 min in a domestic oven at 90 degrees C and subsequently cleaning the skin with soap caused a 50-100-fold increase in the transfer of spores. Comparison of two home-cooking methods (inside a gas flame and in the oven) suggests that the transfer of pollen might be increased by increasing the temperature of the flame.Q: Sharepoint - I'm working with a different master page layout for a subsite I'm working with Sharepoint 2007.
